Hong Kong, September 20, 2011-- Crown Records Management, the world's third largest provider of business information-storage services, has made a strategic investment in building a state-of-the-art records management center near Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Crown Malaysia's new records management facility is currently under construction and on target for completion on April 12, 2012. The new facility is built on 6,400 square meters, or 69,000 square feet. Based on the total land area, the master plan for the whole development of the Crown site will comprise of four phases and have an ultimate capacity of over 3 million cartons when completed. It will boast several innovative elements such as a thermal skin around the building to protect the contents against heat and humidity naturally, natural airflow system within the depository, radiant heat barrier for the roof, rain water harvest tanks and sensor lighting.

Security and health & safety systems and processes will be of the very highest standards to cater to the ever-increasing regulatory requirements. "This completed facility will set the bar to a new height within our industry" says Damian Cross, quality development manager Crown Malaysia.

The facility is located just outside Kuala Lumpur near the international airport (KLIA) within a new office park which is designated for 'clean' light industrial hi-tech firms. "Several years of planning and months of design work has led up to this moment. We believe we have the most suitable site, a great project management team in place and a design that will rival any high quality records centers in the world. We are proud and very excited about this new facility and look forward to its completion," says Mike Arnold, managing director Crown Malaysia.
